Causes of Oppression of Women

Programmes promoted by the Government for empowerment of women through education

Pursuant to the objectives of the National Policy on Education (NPE), 1986, the Mahila Samakhya Scheme was started in 1989 to translate the goals enshrined in the NPE into a concrete programme for the education and empowerment of women in rural-areas, particularly those from socially and economically marginalized groups. Mahila Samakhya Programme is currently being implemented in 63 districts in 9 States of Andhra Pradesh, Assam, Bihar, Jharkhand, Gujarat, Karnataka, Kerala, Uttar Pradesh and Uttaranchal. The Government have approved the expansion of the Scheme in two more States viz. Madhya Pradesh and Chhattisgarh during the Tenth Plan period. The Scheme is funded fully by Government of India and is implemented by autonomous Societies registered at the State level. The key activities of the programme center around issues of health, education of women and girls, accessing public services, addressing issues of violence and social practices, which discriminate against women and girls, gaining entry into local governance seeking sustain able livelihoods, etc. The Tenth Plan budgetary outlay for the scheme is Rs. 98.48 crores.

Schooling has been made completely free for girls in most States upto the higher secondary state. Various Centrally Sponsored Schemes have been formulated to strengthen school education and a large number of girls have benefited from these schemes. Jawahar Navodaya Vidyalayas (JNVs) have been set up in rural areas as pace setting schools for talented rural children and also to ensure greater participation of girls from SC/ST communities and from households below the poverty line.

The Central Social Welfare Board implements the scheme of Condensed Courses of Education for Women for providing skill upgradation and vocational training to girls and women above 15 years who had to discontinue school education or could not join mainstream education system due to adverse family circumstances or other constraints.

One third of seats in JNVs is reserved for girls. In the higher education sector, the University Grants Commission (UGC) has been implemented various schemes for promoting women's education in universities and colleges, like schemes of grants to women's universities for technical courses, scheme for construction of women's hostels, setting up of women's study centers in 34 universities, etc. Participation of women students in polytechnics was one of the thrust areas under World Bank assisted technical education project. The scheme of community polytechnics aims at bringing in communities and encouraging rural development through science and technology apprenticeship and through skill oriented non-formal training focused on women.
